JOKE ON DR. TAYLOR. At nine o'clock yesterday morning person of short wind but benevolent brow rushed into the office of the chief of police and b'ustered forth the astonishing fue ers, and the accused are now free. EDITORS APPRAL—I am now free. A great deal has been said in the papers about me, and I believe that the APPEAL at least will do me the justice to publish that Dr. Taylor was going to fight a duel at ten o'clock, and beseeching Captain at ten o'clock, and beseeching Captain Athy to interfere in behalf of humanity, my statement. I have been variously styled "Fat y" Dugen, "Fatty" McGinnia and simply "Fatty." These are all incorrect. My real name is R. J. Vance, I was born at Watervilst, New York, and have morality and peace. Having said this much the benevolent person rushed forth again and disappeared. The captain put on his hat and walked to the doctor's office, where he found the bellicose gentle-man in as quiet and matter-of-fact meed been an honest man ever since, and I defy as could well be imagined for one who ex-pected to change shots an hour hence. The captain wished to be as polite and all previous ones, to be unfounded ru-mors, and having been released by the chief agreeable as possible toward the urbane doctor, and therefore he mersly told him that there was a person at the station-house who required his services, and hinted that blood had been shed. He did this purposely, in order to beget a serious turn of mind in the doctor, and if possible dispose him to a peaceful solution of the impending difficulty. On the other hand the dector had heard of certain troubles about the city, and imagined that it had prematurely "come off." He therefore hastened his steps. Arriving at therefore hastened his steps. Arriving at the stationhouse the captain informed him of the cause of his arrest, intimating that he was religiously, politically and socially bound to prevent the contemplated disturbance, and in consequence was reluctantly compelled to hold his prisoner until he could enter into bonds to keep the peace. The doctor said nothing, but the things have their way until he was let things have their way until he was taken before the recorder to furnish the required bond. It was then past ten o'ciock, and the doctor felt that the time had come when he might speak. He said
